AMONG BOOKS

A Public School Library to be Opened in Marietta Next Year.

For the past two years the matter of establishing and operating in this city a library which would be accessible to the general reading public has been agitated during the past two years with waverling degrees of persistency. But a project which seemed likely to fail because of a lack of responsible promoters who were willing to devote their time and attention to the establishment of the library has at last become a prospective certainty. In the High School building now under process of erection, 70 feet of space on the lower floor has been set aside for this purpose and will be especially adapted to the storing of books.

The library extension movement in Marietta, while not marked by any great achievements, has yet been replete with the faithful, honest labor of several of the public spirited citizens of the city and the result now is that Marietta has the nucleus of what promises to grow into a large library.

Previous to the coming of Supt. Williams the stock of books in the possession of the public schools amounted to practically nothing. The volumes were old, had seen the ravages of time and rough usage and were, many of them, uninteresting and prosy stories. Prior to Mr. Williams' work in the public schools $10 worth of books had been added in that many years. The Superintendent determined to increase the library and during the several years of his stay in the city he has added over 900 books to the library.

The Board of Education recognizing the need of a library in Marietta, made a levy of 1-10 of a mill on the property of Marietta. This amounts to over $500 a year, which is a fixed and certain sum of money to count on every year. One hundred new books were received Tuesday and the total number of volumes now catalogued is 1356. The books received Tuesday cover a wide range of subjects from science to fiction.

Everything has been arranged for the public library next year. With the income derived from the Board's assessment and the contributions from private sources, several of which have already been made, the public library of Marietta should start off under auspicious circumstances.
